The rain was pouring heavily at the time, but fortunately there are so many hospitule and unclied limitations in the neighborhood that it was necessary to take the people only taken to the county hospitule, on square distant. The removal was enried on with the utmost haste, the patients being carried forth in the beds, on chairs, cofa, stretchers an anything that would permit of transportation. The firemen and the at tendants at the hespital did most of the work, although hundreds o medical students living in the neigh borhood and whos had been uttructed by the conflagration, lent their assistance. None of the hospitul's patients were injured.
